The event that takes place on October 3rd will consist of a reception in the hotel with representatives of the Spanish and British cinema industries.

The event celebrates a decade since the opening of the hotel in the Paddington area, in central London, where it has become an institution over the years. Amongst the celebrities that have stayed at The Caesar Hotel is British actor

Clive Owen, football manager Carlos Queiroz, actress Victoria Abril, film director Ventura Pons, actress Rosy de Palma, composer Jordi Savall.

The Caesar, part of the Spanish hotel chain Derby Hotels Collection has become known for its trademark combination of luxury lodging and exclusive art exhibitions.

The Caesar Hotel is recognisable by its Victorian English-Style façade, which contrasts with its modern, minimalistic interior. Owned by Catalan art collector and history enthusiast Jordi Clos, the hotel has a distinctive collection of ancient Roman and Syrian mosaics, following the trademark characteristic of all hotels from the collection: a combination of art, comfort and luxury, all in one place.

Besides these historical features, the hotel also includes 140 refurbished rooms and many modern amenities, such as a gym, a sauna, a business room, and a privileged views of the Queen's Gardens and a minute away from Hyde Park, along with two exclusive dining options: XO Bar and XO Restaurant, where guests can explore international cuisine with a distinctive Spanish touch without leaving London.

The Anniversary celebration, for which the hotel teamed up with the London Spanish Film Festival, also celebrating 10 years in the city, will be held in the hotel with a reception, including renowned personalities of the cinema industry in Spain and the United Kingdom. The reception will include an exclusive tour showcasing the Roman and Syrian mosaics that decorate its premises.
